(for Ada, on the idea of the loom)
in the far left corner of the room, a text was placed where page 11 out of 24 read:

a set is (a) a group, or (b) a design for an event, or (c) one to win in tennis. (d) laying cutlery on a table, (e) a theory for organising groups in infinity, or (f) the verb used for putting something on fire.

problem solving

a room with an ugly view can be transformed by grouping suitable plants in front of the offending window.

any room in a house can have things that need highlighting as well as lots of features that you’d rather not draw too much attention to. plants can work for you in solving difficult decorating problems and are a lot more fun and cheaper than bringing in the builders.

plants can be used to produce a focus of attention to, or to disguise or camouflage some ugly architectural feature of a room.
the tennis instructor walked in early at the opening. he had been trading lessons for the promise of an artwork, and was now pacing the room trying to look effortless while debating his options. after some contemplation he decided on a piece referencing his own presence in the show. it was hung in his bedroom next to a south facing window overlooking a small park.

when we say that a cat and a dog resemble each other less than two grey hounds do, even if both are tamed or embalmed, even if both are frenzied, even if both have just broken the water pitcher, what is the ground on which we are able to establish the validity of this classification with complete certainty?
